1	George Baxter - The Reverend J. Waterhouse Superintending The Landing Of The Missionaries At TaranakiPrint dated 1844, John Leech frame,290mm x 405mmSurprisingly few depictions of European immigrants arriving in New Zealand exist within our art history. This Baxter print depicts the arrival of the Rev. Charles and Mrs Creed at Taranaki. Reproduced in the Wesleyan Missionary Societies' Journal, the accompanying text described the "Seven native females in a transport of joy, anxiously carrying Mrs Creed with the greatest care to the shore." Indeed the rapturous reception they receive may well have been intended to convince potential missionaries of the welcome they might hope for.The inaccuracies in the print – including the shape of Mt Taranaki, the dress and appearance of the M?ori – reflect the fact that the artist never visited New Zealand. (Picturing History, 2009)

	A Pair of Rare and Important Daoguang Mark and Period Canton Porcelain BowlsWith monochrome lime-green enamelled interiors, painted in the famille rose palette to the exterior with an encircling tribute scene, beneath a rim patterned with gilt quatrefoil diaper motifs on a cobalt ground. Six character iron-red seal marks of Daoguang (1820-1850) under the foot, reserved in a square cartouche on a conforming lime-green glazed ground. The finely painted tribute scene reveals the Emperor carrying a baton of office, an attendant behind him with a fan standing in a walled garden. Eleven courtiers and nobles proceed towards him each carrying a bough or stem of a flowering plant, including peony, lotus, magnolia and chrysanthemum. These two bowls are part of a known and recorded service either purchased by or commissioned specifically for John Reeves (1774-1856). Reeves went to China in 1812 and subsequently became Chief Inspector of Tea for the East India Company in Canton. He was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society in 1817, and as a keen naturalist, instructed by Sir Joseph Banks the Society's President, he sent living specimens of Chinese flowering plants back to England. Hence, he was responsible for the introduction of many garden plants to the West including chrysanthemums, azaleas and wisteria. The appeal to Reeves of the tribute scene with numerous flowering specimens illustrated on the bowls is obvious. One with hairline at rim, the other with minute frit at rim.Diameter 106mm, height 56mm
